Preface

Of those distinguished members of Gen. Harrison's staff in the latter part of the year 1811 & the beginning of the year 1812, the name of General Robert Goodloe Harper ranked among the first. His reputation still survives. I have been induced to set forth the main facts in the life of General Harper, believing that their perusal will not be uninteresting. They are as follows:

1. A brief account of his early life until he left South Carolina for New York & settled in Philadelphia

Chapter II. In Congress.

On Monday, Feb. 9, 1795, Harper took his seat in Congress as a representative of South Carolina. [Annals, 1793-5, 1795, p. 1164. The 2d Congress - 2nd sess. This Journal Committee, Annals, 1794, p. 1] He was appointed on committees for the relief of sufferers by fire in Charleston, for the relief of Georgia, for the relief of Wolcott, for the relief of Pierce County. In 1791 a survey of the coast of Virginia had been begun by direct process. Harper drew the article for such a survey & pushing it & it was adopted. A loan by the United States for completing such a work, became of use to the national Congress. [Annals, 1st Cong. 3d sess., & 2nd 1793-4 pp. 149-158]. He rose often to call attention to the improvements in Coast Survey by the National Government. [illegible]

His experience with Canada & the relations needed him to give a complete [illegible]

[illegible] ment understanding the right of Congress in the premises. Upon [illegible] the sale [illegible]. And in case of the [illegible] that territory be appropriated [illegible] of lands in large tracts & speculators. A [illegible] would be [illegible] of the sales to the [illegible] for [illegible] the value of lands to the purchasers under the small lots as actual settlers might need them. This would put speculators [illegible] the Government under the [illegible] settlers. [Annals 1790-1791]

Harper's utterances into Congress were in the midst of the negotiations with Lafayette during the Terror. [illegible] Paris [illegible] Jays treaty was signed Nov. 19, 1794, but it did not reach Washington until March 7, 1796. When the provisions were known opposition to swept the Country with the violence of a hurricane." [Life & Works of Thos. Jefferson, Vol. 4, p. 278.] Jefferson called it a farce. Jay was burned in effigy. As an appropriation was necessary to carry the treaty into effect, it had to come before the House. Livingston called for the papers connected with the treaty. This called out notable speeches. [Annals 1795-6, pp. 457, 747, 801, 886, 810, 965, 1171.] Washington refused to send the papers, because the Constitution made the Senate the Executive's adviser. Some Federalists were willing to go to war rather than submit to such encroachment. Sherman was firm. "This is a plain case, and the House ought to make the appropriation." [One of the finest speeches was by Fisher Ames.] Resolutions were introduced [Annals, p. 747.] that a treaty is not valid till the House has passed the appropriation. Harper replied that in limited government the boat crashing power may be limited. The boat making power has been from 6 to 8 knots per hour. A boat is not a land vessel and is not to the same. A boat derives its power from the element of speed, while a land vessel is from the element of a surface. Land vessels, boats are accidents. Speed is in the province of the law of nations, the legislature cannot be to with reasonable care. The legislature cannot check a vessel, unless the boat making power and a law. Second Query. Can not American freedom at this time & State Governments all subsist together?

For the Reasons, contained in the foregoing Observations, I answer both Questions in the Negative. The first Query must be rejected. The second Query might take the direction of many Consequential resolutions, proper for the Congress to pass, or Negotiations for them to make with the States; Congress might declare, that the Union ought to be preserved; that the Confederation should be revised, corrected & improved; that the Quotas of Contributions should be more equally laid; that Congress should have Power to raise Money by Taxes, Duties, Excises, Imposts, Loans, Lotteries, Stamps, Confiscations, Requisitions, Quotas of Militia, Regulars, Navy, Forts, Arsenals, Magazines, Arms, Ammunition, Clothing, Fortifications, Garrisons, Fleets, Armies, Treasuries, Banks, Mints, Seals, Stamps, Commissions, Offices, Officers, Courts, Judges, Juries, Executions, Gaols, Punishments, Rewards, Salaries, Expences, Accounts, Vouchers, Warrants, Duties, Powers, Jurisdictions, Authorities, Rights, Liberties, Privileges, Immunities, Franchises, Attainders, Forfeitures, Pardons, Naturalizations, Laws, Ordinances, Sanctions, Proclamations, Orders, Decrees, Instructions, Directions, Recommendations, Requisitions, Resolutions, Negotiations, Treaties, Alliances, Indian Affairs, Intercourse, Trade, Coin, Value of Coin, Weights, Measures, Division of Time, Space, Distance, Mensuration, Surveying, Geography, Navigation, Commerce, Manufactures, Agriculture, Fisheries, Mines, Minerals, Science, Literature, Arts, Commerce, Exchange, Insurance, Revenue, Debts, Credits, Finance, Economy, Bankruptcies, Expedients, Means, Ways, Provisions, Supplies, War, Peace, Neutrality, Alliances, Treaties, Captures, Embargoes, Contraband, Blockade, Hostages, Ransom, Reprisals, Letters of Marque, Declarations, Suspensions, Revocations, Repeals, Amendments, Alterations, Additions, Supplements, Explanations, Limitations, Restrictions, Prohibitions, Penalties the wonder has formerly been that the third Carlos negotiation was the only successful one.

More than that he said though our relations had not always been of the most friendly character we should not forget that for nearly a century we had been on terms of peace with you. The last thousand of those years had been marked by a spirit of peace & friendship on our part. The last thousand years had been the test of a people & their merits on our part & in this we stand pre-eminent. The confinement of our race was really brought about by the treachery of the Moors. Now the conditions have changed & we are only forced to defend ourselves when attacked. Now Morocco should be ashamed for a while rather than to confess all the horrors of war.

Moreover the treaty granted our diplomats no advantage in the East & denied the Moroccan trade privileges & basis for a future more beneficial arrangement.

In order to accomplish the object of the Constitution it is necessary to read the last sentence as if it were [illegible] "Three fifths of the New England members & of those most of those from the Middle States, but only from the South, with the two thirds." Harper was discussing his present view placing the Eastern & Southern sections on a footing by adding the Southern vote, & would consequently in the South, which had weight thereby to the Scale of Slavery. Benedict Arnold, Letters of Delegates to Congress, 1774-1789, 2: 317]. Both Harper was for a union against the Constitution. He defended the treaty & declared his arguments for it. His Slaughter & Jefferson's reasoning under the Examples of the Federalists.

In the Fifth & Sixth Congresses Harper was the Federal leader [Schaeffer, Hist. of the U. S. 1: 354]. He was made Chairman of the Committee on Ways & Means [Dec. 9, 1797, Annals of Congress, 1797, p. 672; 1798, p. 19], & was again appointed Dec. 9, 1799, for the last session he served. In this position he had charge of all the finances & claims & the administration at the critical period of the threatened war with France.

In 1797 Harper published his "Observations on the Dispatch of Lord Grenville to the United States & France", - in which he launched a very strong case against France. The publication brought Harper much notice. [Sato, Peter Porcupine, in Political Works, p. 53, in a tirade against Harper says that the pamphlet which gained him so much renown in England & which were greeted with high encomiums in both houses of Parliament & received the Thanks of the Nation, for the materials drawn therefrom... While Lord Grenville was extolling their pamphlet in one House, Mr. Canning in the other, while they were paying such a handsome tribute to the talents, candour & integrity of the Honorable Members of the American Congress ..... After this pamphlet has so appeared in England, after the English address had been echoed & re-echoed through America... Harper publishes a new edition. .... the pamphlet did great good in both countries & great injury to France". J. Cabot wrote April 20, 1798 to Jno. Adams - In Gibbs' Life of Oliver Wolcott 3:48 - "We had run a race pamphlet with Harper's excellent speech & pamphlet ... Hamilton must devote himself to drawing to the people the favourable impressions of what is done .... If he knows the extent of his own strength, he can bitten would stimulate him to the most laborious undertakings". Also on 2:119 quoting a letter from Wm Smith, Minister to Portugal, Aug. 17, 1795,

"Hamilton's pamphlet was translated into Portuguese & distributed here gratis. ... it was printed by order of the Government." Fisher Ames wrote to Chris. Gore in London, July 25, 1795 - See Life & Works of Fisher Ames 1:236. — Did Lord Grenville & Dundas know that their subsidies on his book would help the Treasury by warning a good thing in Congress? Yes to Dundas. Hawkins is a fine fellow, but Grenville has kept spirited him".

For impeachment of Blount account of part of this session of Congress, & Harper's work a leading part in the case, a fuller account of it is given in the following Chapter.

The Jacobin measures of Genêt &
Adet in naturalizing &, the Alien act,

Alien Enemies Act, Sedition Act, were all disapproved by Jefferson. In advocating the limitation of naturalization facilities he said [Annals, 1st, p. 1267] it was time to stand on the ancient ground of admitting foreigners to citizenship. This mistake had been produced in a very great degree by the country's having adopted a system of citizenship. The true test — even when it was proper to declare that nothing but birth should entitle a man to citizenship in this country. We were forming governments every where, for acquiring land, securing liberty, & transmitting it to future generations, but they should not be given the right of self-government because they could not have the same views as native citizens. It was an undoubting principle of civil society that none but persons home in a country, should be denied to take part in the government." The bill becoming a non-naturalized citizen's dream law June 18. [W. Macdonald, Select Documents of United States History, p. 138.]

One of Harkins last speeches in Congress [July 21, 1801, Annals p. 1140] was in advocacy of the Continuing the Judiciary Act which he regarded "as a shield for the liberty of the press & the freedom of opinion.... I wish to interpose this law between the freedom of discussion & the overbearing sway of that by means of which a certain political party in this country is elevated.... Which compels to itself to speak in the name of the people, honor neither moderation, mercy, nor justice; regards neither of using, decidedly, not explicit, tramples down with relentless fury, all that dares resist its fashion oppose its progress, or resist its decisions." .... The Sedition act was the barrier that stood between Democratic party & public liberty. His whole career had been marked by the same jealous support of administration measures, of simple military & naval preparations as the surest means of protection & respect abroad — & of avoiding encroachments exercised by France.

Upon the floor of his Congressional career [March 5, 1801.] Harper detected a reversal of his & his party's conduct in Congress. The change which occurred — March 4, 1801, was the first in a series of the party's gross blows to overthrow. For while upon the Federalists had been heaped with profusion the trust was to be made of a new theory now. "Should the future conduct of the Government be retrospective principles", Hayne rose to a pinnacle in South Carolina, & with steadiness, vigour, & prudence - his elevation was from a - public blessing. He was ~~dead~~ not what was a sufficient reason for - forming his election". He had no - son for the Democrat & dwelled upon the words "the federal union - Law or nonsense, by which the prosperity of the United States has been - successfully managed; the principles & execution of nullification, the support of Jackson, & the welfare of the federal government itself &, last mentioned, the master Foreign policy by which that nation has been exalted with an - unsullied reputation in the courts of Europe, & respected, & happiness. From an - address of Hon - Stephen Decatur to many first citizens late Public life, with

when it was my pride & boast to shed blood, wealth & even life with pleasure in the cause. " The leading principle of this system as to foreign nations has been to preserve peace with all but to grant privileges to none, & to submit to indignities from none, relying for the protection of our rights next to the God who rules our events, but on our own strength. By these principles, as a people we have maintained the nations in peace through the most general & furious war of modern times. England & France were both endeavouring to draw us into it, we resisted both & surmounted all difficulties with at an advancement of national rights & honor. We have established a navy which has asserted the rights protects our Commerce - with Spain
we have settled a territorial dispute & have honorable & advantageous to our nation.

In domestic concerns Mr Parker has supported the authority of the federal government, which alone, he thought, was capable of ensuring our safety from abroad by affording a united strength, & of maintaining peace at home, by checking the ambition of the States. It was of the main importance to make the federal Government as independent as possible of state influence. In every struggle between the federal & the state Governments, Mr Parker considered the State Government as possessing the greater natural strength, & therefore thought it his duty to take the part of the weaker party. For the same reason he supported the Executive against the encroachments of the Popular Legislature.

Another reason of Harper's was that public officials could not be induced to accept public trust unless they could be assured, maintained by the office. Otherwise it would be difficult to prevail on men of the highest character to accept office. To compensate handsomely all the chief officers of government would cost less than one incompetent man might waste in a month.

For revenue economy is necessary. Harper said nine millions derived from imposts cost less & was felt less than four hundred thousand dollars from a direct property tax. For encouraging trade Harper had advocated establishment of banks, encouragement of inland navigation, commercial conventions, treaties, sending consuls to leading cities, erection of lighthouses, harbour improvements, & Coast defences. These had been his principles. In the momentary eclipse of these principles by a Republican Discomfiture, when it was said the sun of Federalism had set forever, Harper did not lose hope. With confidence he prophesied the final triumph of Federalism. "The sun of Federalism may set," he said, "but it will rise again. The mists of democracy may obscure it for a moment, but they cannot darken its lustre, much less extinguish its light. It may set; but the enlightened nations of the earth, and dreams of fanciful good, will wake to mourn its absence, & sigh for its return. It will return; the nations shall hail its approach, & rejoice in the brightness of its course.

Names may change; the men who hold the reins may be different; the denominations & parties may be altered or forgotten; but the principles on which the Federalists have acted, must be adopted, & those men must be pursued, or the government must fall to pieces."*

* [Works, 1:326].

Chapter III. Impeachment Trials.

There have been seven trials on impeachment under the Constitution of the United States. In the first three of these cases Harper participated, once as one of the Managers on the part of the House of Representatives, & twice as Counsel for the impeached. These early cases were particularly important because they established precedents. Impeachment having been borrowed from the English Constitution & having been more or less loosely defined in the native Statutes, the accused in the next succeeding, as those much change was necessary in the application as it existed in England.

There are two schools of interpretation; one holds that the power of impeachment extends only to such offenders as may of-towards indicted according to law. This was Harper's view. The other view is that "high crimes & Misdemeanors" embrace not only indictable offences, but also those wider & vaguer political offences not to be reached by the ordinary law.

Impeachment of Senator Blount.

The first impeachment to occur under the present Constitution was that of Senator Blount of Tennessee. [Wharton's State Trials, p. 31; Annals of Congress, 1797 S.] Blount had been a the Continental Congress & had been governor of the Mid west territory. He aided & abetted the settlement of the Cumberland & the Alleghenies in English interests. It is suspected that under Blount's influence was attempted with success by a country named Wilkinson. Horpin then proceeds to prove that a Senator is not a civil officer of the United States. The Constitution, he says, uses the term officer in the most general sense. According to derivation, office signifies duty or employment. If the duties which fall to the lot of a permanent character are to constitute a civil office, a member of a civil service board should be regarded as the highest officer of the land, inasmuch as the duties of the latter relate exclusively to the civil government.

Sharpless position in this fugitive impeachment case was: 1. that impeached must be arrested 2. his Secretary may be Confidential 3. Senator or Rep. of the United States for trial. The treatment of the impeached Criminal would be built by congress according to the Constitutional Provisions, & the Chief Justice, but the decision was not known. What happened in the Chase impeachment was not known, but Sharpless believed would depend upon the votes cast by the majority in the Senate.

Impeachment of Judge Pickering

The second impeachment in the history of the United States was that of Judge John Pickering of the Federal District Court of New Hampshire. His case has been referred to the Republican Senators & Federalist Judges as Democrats. The latter were in favor of conviction, the former divided among themselves. The articles of impeachment framed by Jonathan Dayton of New Jersey [illegible] March 1803, House of Congress 1803 p. 38] charged Pickering with drunken & profane behavior in the court room, & with holding in the case was very profane. [Annals of Congress 1803 p. 38] Judge Pickering had declared in the words by case "that he could preach the Democrats out of their senses" "but damned if he could be sober by morning" The attorney

The Lower House of Representatives came in with their Speaker & Clerk. The Question put, Was Cabin or Cockpit? Resolved, the record was read the Clerk of the House of Representatives. The record from the Senate was read. The Second Impeachment Trial was ended.

The Senate Impeachment Trial Concerns the Executive Department of the Government. The Senate had heard the Evidence & Impeachment Trial & the Second Charge Against Blount was managed by the Federalists. Witnesses were examined of the writers (Publius) who defended the United States. The Federalist was written by Alexander Hamilton, John Jay, and James Madison. Hamilton wrote 51 of the essays, Jay wrote 5, and Madison wrote 14. Three essays were written by two of the authors. Hamilton and Madison disagreed on the authorship of 12 essays, but modern historians believe Madison wrote all of them. The Federalist Papers are considered one of the most important documents in American history.

Jefferson's plan of government would have gradually advanced. He did not believe in the "rotten principle" of long probated wars. He believed that the people would unite to form a Republican Government & favour Freedom of Religion.

The Counsel for the Respondent, Mr. Butler contended. That both English & American Legislation & the Constitution of the United States shew that impeachment is not an inquiry into the guilt or innocence of the Person but is a Criminal prosecution for the violation of some Law. To whom is impeachable, unless it be the proper subject of punishment. The Constitution is a limited grant of power, not expressed, or by necessary implication granted away. When therefore the Constitution declares that that is an offence which may be impeached, it gives power to impeach him for those acts, and power to impeach him for any other acts is withheld. The provisions of the Constitution, therefore, must be considered as declaring that the impeachment shall be confined to a criminal nature of those acts.

In the State Constitutional encroachment has been considered a criminal prosecution for defined offences. This is a clear violation of personal rights & political principles. It is not a wrong in treason if tried by for. Majority in power when unfavorable to the impeached, nothing in treason when tried by friends. When the two offices of Governor & Senator are held by same man in Ref. but when Executive & Judicial union into a third tribunal is gone.

The officers of Northern Colleagues were removed with success. The principle that impeachment applied only to indictable offences was sustained. The Senate declared that Samuel Chase should be acquitted of all the articles exhibited against him. Although this session of the Senate afforded Colonel Harper an adequate field for his abilities, yet a speech he read briefly is noteworthy when read in the light of recent events. The occasion was a proposed amendment to a Navigation Bill introduced by Mr. Bibb of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. [Annals, p. 372.] The bill proposed to confine American navigation to American seamen. Harper's amendment had for its object the gradual exclusion from the navy of those who were not native or at that time already naturalized citizens of the United States. Chapter VI. Colonization.

On the eastern coast of Africa a thriving and energetic native population has existed from time immemorial. Its history of these native tribes of Negroes, however, remains almost entirely unknown to us. Nearly all the coast towns are of Portuguese origin, and they are commercially dependent on the Portuguese. Before they crossed the sea, most of the Negro tribes were almost entirely ignorant of the benefits of civilization to their physical lives.

Today these regions are a fruitful, abundant, native country, accompanying a territory of some 100 square miles, with a population of nearly two million [illegible] in [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

With Gerrit Smith Senator Colonel Harper Lord Brougham & others the Colonization Society is not, as I am informed, the Colony of Liberia must ever be considered as the favorite Colony founded by the United States. Liberia is of far greater interest to us than all the Islands on the Coast of Africa which might have formed the Emancipation of Slaves settled & planted which have since become Foreign Colonies.

Here then was the work of a Movement towards Colonization on a large scale. This movement was undertaken by the American Government at the Termination of the Revolutionary War.

Rev. Robert Finley was the founder of the American Colonization Society. Hence

Mr. Gurley were appointed a committee to draft a constitution & by-laws for the Society which were regularly organized & officered on January, 1817. Mr. Finley had before this visited & met the Hon. Horatio Gates of Va. & he was elected President of the Society of Virginia. He published "Thoughts on the Colonization of the Free Blacks", 1816. Samuel J. Mills, 1818, organized at Williamstown, Mass. for missionary work & Society which was soon transferred to Andover & became auxiliary to the American Bible Society & the American Board of Foreign Missions. The idea of Mills was to colonize Negroes between the Gambia & the Sierra Leone, on the African coast.

As long as the freemen existed in the midst of slavery, it was not very difficult to create a corrupting influence adverse to the continued existence of the latter. General Harper urged that to remove the negroes from their position of danger would be a proof of weakness. But there is no argument worthy to be used in favor of the most reasonable Colonization of the free and Colonization does not aim at the destruction of the United States entirely of slaves. From this point of view Colonization must simply be looked to as a means for an end. "To know" he says "the best men the most discerning statesmen of their day, were deeply impressed, no man could fail to be, from almost every

Harbour was of the opinion that to substitute a free white class of labourers for slaves, was as practicable as it would be unjust, & that Colonization was the first step in that direction. All examples taken from the experience in this Country was against it, for it is said to the black race would be intolerable. But in fact the nearly destroyed the Society. Which would open the way for Colonization and thereby relieve the difficulty of the surrounding evil. If the Gullahs could be established in Africa they would soon form a civilized population surrounding them & their former degradation. Then if the Causes of the Difficulties were removed relating between the Native Africans & the Africo-American in the U.S. would cease. [Extract from the writings of Dr. Ferd. Douglas in Frederick Douglas Paper.]

When the question came up of making aid of the United States Government for the Society, General Harper warmly supported the Liberia idea and early took up the Government. He framed resolutions and carried the building of the vessel. All they could do was taken. The Legislature took hold to colonize the free blacks. But private efforts each returned made a few thousands of them. The task needed a far mightier hand, & it must have them auxiliary features, & must be gradual, voluntary with consent of the blacks. The grand national means, the object was limited in its consequences. The national must mean the national evil. It may effect the extinction of slavery in the District of Columbia, but the fruit of the national undertaking. Dec. 1, 1862 favours colonization of free negroes etc &c

"A name that is peculiar, short, & familiar & that expresses the object & nature of the establishment in Liberia, which denotes a settlement of people made free. Such a name is easy, apt, & concise". The name was adopted. Then Samuel Harper proposed to call the Capital Monrovia "as a mark of gratitude to that venerable name to whom it owes more than to any other Statesman, it being perfectly well known that but for the favourable ... of that great Patron & friend, our efforts must have been unavailing". [J. Sketches, 9:511 A.C.S. Reports, 7:5]. The town was Cape Palmas – the town of the Governor [Thomas Buchanan, Johnson's Biographies] was named Harper by the Society for the town & around the County of the Capital. [J. & C. Standard, 2:11].
